PREFACE

SNH Facts and Figures 1996/97, contains a range of useful facts and statistics about SNH's work and is a companion publication to our Annual Report. SNH came into being on 1 April 1992, and in our first Annual Report we published an inventory of Sites of Special Scientific Interest (SSSIs). After an interval of five years it is appropriate to now update this inventory. We have also provided a complete Scottish listing of National Nature Reserves, National Scenic Areas, European sites and certain other types of designation.

As well as the information on sites, we have also published information on our successes during 1996/97 including partnership funding of projects, details of grants awarded, licences issued and our performance in meeting our standards for customer care. We have also published a full list of management agreements concluded in 1996/97.

We hope that those consulting this document will find it a useful and valuable record. We are committed to being open in the way we work and if there is additional information you require, contact us, either at any local offices (detailed in the telephone directory) or through our Public Affairs Branch, Scottish Natural Heritage, 12 Hope Terrace, Edinburgh EH9 2AS.

CONSULTATIONS

Natural Standards 1996/97

Natural Standards is SNH's response to the Government's Citizen Charter. Through Natural Standards we promise to deliver good quality services and to foster customer care in everything we do.

One of our commitments under Natural Standards is to monitor how quickly we respond to enquiries. The majority of queries fall into eight broad categories: information & advice; publications; grants; consultations; licences; permits; objections to SSSI notifications; and management agreements. Each category has its own standards as regards to how long a reply should take. These are set out in our Natural Standards leaflet which is available free of charge from any of our offices.

The table below outlines our performance for 1996/97.

| Natural Standards Category | Total Contacts | Within Standards |
|-----------------------------------|-----------------------|-------------------------|
| Information & Advice | 75,541 | 97% |
| Consultations | 2,734 | 96% |
| Grants | 1,448 | 94% |
| Publications | 2,351 | 99% |
| Licences | 180 | 91% |
| Permits | 286 | 100% |
| Management Agreements | 95 | 93% |

There were no objections to SSSI notification recorded in 1996/97.

In 1996/97 we received a total of 82,635 contacts; nearly all enquiries were answered on the same day, and where further action was required we met the required standards more than 95% of the time. The majority of enquiries sought information or advice and here our standards were even higher; again most enquiries were satisfied immediately and for the 11,316 that were not, a final response was supplied within the standards' targets on 97% of occasions.

Public Access to environmental information under the Environmental Information Regulations 1992 - a statement

Background

As a government body with responsibilities for the environment, Scottish Natural Heritage is subject to the Environmental Regulations 1992, the UK statutory instrument implementing the EC Directive of Freedom of Access to information on the Environment.

These regulations give the public a general right of access to environmental information held by SNH, unless there are 'substantive reasons for refusing'. SNH is obliged to respond to requests, and give a full written explanation for refusal or restriction of access.

The SNH Approach

SNH welcomes the regulations, which complement its open and accountable operating style. SNH is developing policies for the application of the Regulations, in liaison with sister agencies in England, Wales and Northern Ireland, to ensure consistency.

There will be a presumption in favour of release of information unless the reasons for refusal are compelling - for instance if disclosing the details about rare species could endanger them. Enquiries may be referred back to the customer if fulfilling the request is likely to create an unreasonable amount of extra work and/or if a charge is likely to be made.

As well as responding to specific requests, SNH publishes an extensive range of information about the Scottish environment in the form of research reports, policy statements, guidance notes, information leaflets and booklets, and Annual Reports.

A catalogue of publications is available free of charge from Design and Publications, Scottish Natural Heritage, Battleby, Redgorton, Perth PH1 3EW, Tel 01738 627921 Fax 01738 827411.

Management Agreements concluded under Section 16 of the National Parks and Access to the Countryside Act 1949 between 1 April 1992 and 31 March 1996

The numbers of Section 16 agreements are far fewer than those under Section 15 and details of Section 16 agreements have not previously been published annually. This omission has now been corrected with the documenting of agreements concluded over the first four years of SNH's life. In future years we anticipate publishing Section 16 agreements concluded in the year as a matter of course. The area given is that covered by the agreement which may in certain cases extend outwith the NNR. No costs are given in this summary table as these are likely to vary from year to year.

Distribution of SSSI by Local Authority areas

Sites of Special Scientific Interest are exemplary places in Scotland for nature conservation. They are special for their plants or animals or habitat, their rocks or landforms or a combination of these. Designation is a legal process.

Total areas notified as SSSI by 31 March 1997

The table shows the number and extent of Sites of Special Scientific Interest (SSSI) which have been notified in Scotland under Section 23 of the National Parks and Access to the Countryside Act 1949 or Section 28 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, as areas of special interest by reason of their flora, fauna, or geographical or physiographical features.

Damage to SSSI in Scotland: 1 April 1996 to 31 March 1997

Owners and occupiers of SSSIs notified under the Wildlife and Countryside Act, 1981, are required to consult SNH before carrying out any activity likely to damage or destroy features of interest. To act without consultation may result in a fine.

In keeping with new monitoring standards due to be fully implemented in April 1998, damage cases have been ascribed to seven types of activity, and the threshold separating 'long-term' from 'short-term' damage has been reduced from 15 to three years. The definitions used in the following tables are thus:

Cause of damage: agriculture, forestry, development, recreation, sporting, other activities, and 'unknown';
Short-term damage: from which interest features are likely to recover in three years or less;
Long-term damage: from which recovery will require more than three years;
Recovery unlikely: damage from which interest features are unlikely to recover.

The following cases of damage were reported during 1 April 1996 - 31 March 1997. Categories against which no significant damage was recorded have been omitted from the table.

There are 108 proposed SAC sites identified on the list published by government on 31st March 1995. Consultation with all owner/occupiers and interested parties has been undertaken for these 108 sites. The sites in the list marked with * were forwarded to Brussels in June 1995 for consideration on a European Union.

The sites in the list marked with  were forwarded to Brussels on January 1996 for consideration on a European Union.

The sites marked with  were forwarded to Brussels in October 1996 for consideration on a European Union

Sites marked with (m) are marine SACs.

Biosphere Reserves - as at 31 March 1997

Biosphere Reserves are nominated by national governments for inclusion in the 'UNESCO Man and the Biosphere Programme' set up in 1971 to co-ordinate understanding of man's influence on the natural environment. There is no statutory requirement for Biosphere Reserves. Reserves were originally envisaged simply to be representative examples of natural habitats, characteristic of one of the world's natural regions. In recent years the concept has evolved somewhat. In brief, under new criteria each reserve is now intended to fulfil three complementary functions:

- a conservation function - to conserve genetic resources, species habitats, and landscapes
- a development function - to foster sustainable economic and human development
- a demonstration function - to support demonstration projects, environmental education and training, and research and monitoring related to conservation and sustainable development.

Each reserve should contain one or more core areas (securely protected areas), a clearly identified buffer zone (dedicated to activities complementary to the conservation interests) and a wider area of sustainable use (where the natural resource is managed and developed in a sustainable way compatible with the environment).

There are 9 Biosphere Reserves in Scotland all of which are existing NNRs. They were nominated prior to 1992 by the Nature Conservancy Council and were selected on the basis of the original criteria. SNH is now considering the options for Scotland's portfolio of Biosphere Reserves.

Biogenetic Reserves - as at 31 March 1997

In response to the Bern Convention (ratified by the UK Government in 1983), the Council of Europe established a network of reserves, to continue to conserve representative examples of European flora and fauna and natural areas. They are intended primarily for biological research, and are selected from existing NNRs. No special controls are imposed by the designation. SNH advises the Secretary of State on appropriate NNRs for nomination to the Council of Europe. Two Scottish sites have been included in the network.

World Heritage Sites - as at 31 March 1997

World Heritage Sites (WHSs) are areas of outstanding or cultural value. They can include exceptional examples of outstanding natural habitats, or superlative natural features. Sites are listed by the World Heritage Committee of UNESCO under the Convention of World Cultural and Natural Heritage adopted in 1972. A high standard of management is required before the listing of the site can be considered. St Kilda, which is owned by the National Trust for Scotland, is Scotland's only WHS designated because of its natural value.

Long Distance Routes

No new Long Distance Routes were declared by the Secretary of State during 1996/97. The total length of the four Long Distance Routes in Scotland is 550 km consisting of:

- The Pennine Way (Scottish section) (10km), the northern-most stretch of which just enters Scotland
- The West Highland Way (152km), running from Milngavie to Fort William - opened in 1980
- The Speyside Way, the approved route runs from Glenmore to the Moray Firth, but only the stretch from Spey Bay to Ballindalloch (48km) has been implemented - opened in 1981
- and The Southern Upland Way (340km) from Portpatrick to Cocksburnspath - opened in 1984.

Historic Gardens and Designed Landscapes

There are 275 Historic Gardens and Designed Landscapes listed within the “Inventory of Gardens and Designed Landscapes in Scotland”. The inventory was published in 1987. It provides a representative sample of important historic gardens and landscapes. It includes private gardens, parks, policies in country estates and botanical gardens. The Town and Country Planning General Development Procedures (Scotland) Order 1992 and Circular 6/1992 puts an obligation on planning authorities to consult with SNH and Historic Scotland on any developments within listed sites. An extension to the Inventory is under way and it is expected this may result in the addition of an estimated 100 further sites by 1999.

National Scenic Areas

National Scenic Areas (NSAs) are nationally important areas of outstanding natural beauty. They represent some of the best examples of Scotland’s grandest landscapes, particularly lochs and mountains. They were identified by the Countryside Commission for Scotland (a predecessor body to SNH) in the report ‘Scotland’s Scenic Heritage’ and introduced by the Government in 1980 through the issue of Circular 20/1980 (subsequently replaced by Circular 9/1987). Policies for the protection of NSAs are covered by Circular 9/1987 and in Local Authority development plans. SNH is required to be consulted on specific categories of development. The 40 Areas extend from the Solway Firth to Shetland.

Local Nature Reserves

Local Nature Reserves are sites which, in a local context, are of high conservation interest or of a high value for education and informal enjoyment of nature by the public. They are established by Local Authorities under Section 21 of the National Parks and Access to the Countryside Act 1949 as amended.

Regional Parks

Regional Parks (designated under Section 48A of the Countryside (Scotland) Act 1967) are extensive areas of the countryside which provide for the co-ordinated management of facilities for informal recreation alongside and in close collaboration with the management of other land uses in the area. The four parks in Scotland were established by the former Regional Councils and confirmed by the Secretary of State. Management of Regional Parks has now transferred to Local Councils.

Country Parks

Country Parks are relatively small areas of countryside near to towns which are managed for public enjoyment. A variety of facilities are provided for informal recreation such as picnicking, walking and water activities. There are now 36 Country Parks, mainly in the Central Belt. They are established in accordance with Section 48 of the Countryside (Scotland) Act 1967. The majority are owned or managed by local authorities with the support of Scottish Natural Heritage. Most parks provide a Ranger Service to facilitate visitor enjoyment.
