3 Longniddry Bents

Nestled between the Forth and the coast road is the long sandy beach of Longniddry Bents. There are rock pools to explore, areas of semi-natural coastal grassland bright with flowers in the spring and summer, and fine views looking towards Edinburgh and the Forth Bridges. Many sea and wading birds frequent this area making it a regular haven for bird-watchers. Grey seals are often spotted to the west of the bay. Look out for the remains of World War II anti-tank defences. Longniddry Bents is part of the John Muir Way coastal walk.

4 Dirleton Castle

Romantic Dirleton Castle has graced the heart of the picturesque village of Dirleton since the 13th century. For the first 400 years, it served as the residence of three noble families. It was badly damaged during Cromwell's siege of 1650, but its fortunes revived in the 1660s when the Nisbet family built a new mansion close to the ruins. The beautiful gardens that grace the castle grounds today date from the late 19th and early 20th centuries and include the world's longest herbaceous border!

5 Yellowcraig Beach

Yellowcraig is a natural cove beach with spectacular views to the 1885 lighthouse on Fidra. The soft white sands make it a popular family beach, a great place for rock pooling and finding your own small treasures! Yellowcraig also offers a nature trail and a network of footpaths through the sheltered woodlands and extensive grassland dotted with wildflowers and butterflies in the summer. There is an adventure play area located next to the car park and a barbecue site (which must be pre-booked with the council).

7 Islands of the Forth

These small internationally protected islands are havens for wildlife. Boat trips are available from North Berwick, or enjoy excellent views from the coast. They also have literary and lighthouse links! The engineers responsible for the lighthouses on the islands of the Forth were from the same Stevenson family as Scots writer Robert Louis Stevenson.

Boat trips available from North Berwick.

• Bass Rock

Described by David Attenborough as 'spectacular' and 'perfection'. This volcanic plug is the world's largest single rock gannetry. It is home to tens of thousands of gannets that turn the rock white in summer with their sheer numbers. Seals, whales and dolphins are also regularly seen in the area.

• Fidra, Craigleith and Lamb

These islands are also the result of ancient volcanic activity. The islands support colonies of seabirds, particularly puffins, and seals regularly pop up their heads to see what you're up to. Fidra is a true treasure island! It inspired Robert Louis Stevenson in his famous book of the same name.

• Isle of May National Nature Reserve

This National Nature Reserve is heaving with nesting seabirds and is one of the best places to see puffins. The Isle of May is also a regular haunt for grey seals, often seen hauled out on the shoreline rocks. Further inland you'll find a carpet of wild flowers. This island is a historical gem and it's been a place of pilgrimage for centuries with an early island monastery.

8 Tantallon Castle

A formidable stronghold set on the top of cliffs in a dramatic and wild location. Climb to the top of the battlements and enjoy spectacular views over the Firth of Forth. Tantallon Castle was the seat of the Douglas family, one of the most powerful baronial families in Scotland. Tantallon served as a noble fortification for more than three centuries and endured three sieges, the last by Oliver Cromwell's army. The mighty stone curtain wall, the best 14th-century castle architecture anywhere in Scotland, gives tremendous views to the Bass Rock with its colony of gannets.

9 Hopetoun Monument

The Hopetoun Monument, erected in 1824 in memory of John Hope, sits on top of the Garleton Hills above Haddington and dominates the skyline for miles around. A path runs from a small car park at the base of the hill winding up steeply through wooded slopes and a corridor of gorse before coming out onto the open hilltop. Climb the 132 steps of the monument's dark spiral staircase to reach a platform. The views are superb: the Firth of Forth and Fife, Edinburgh and the Pentland Hills to the west, and the Lammermuir Hills to the south.

10 Flag Heritage Centre

The St Andrew's Cross, or Saltire, is Scotland's national flag. Tradition has it that the flag, the oldest in Europe and the Commonwealth, originated in a battle fought near the village of Athelstaneford in 832AD. An army of Scots and Picts under King Angus, faced by a larger force of Saxons, were inspired to victory when the cross of St Andrew appeared in the sky above the fighting. Enjoy an audio-visual dramatisation of the event in the Flag Heritage Centre which lies behind Athelstaneford Church and occupies a lectern doocot built in 1583, and restored in 1996.

Open daily, 9.00am and 6.00pm from Apr - Oct, and on 30 Nov (St Andrew's Day).

12 Preston Mill and Phantassie Doocot

An idyllic 18th-century water mill with a distinctive conical-roofed kiln and red pantiled buildings, Preston Mill is extremely popular with artists and photographers. The mill remained in operation until 1959 and the water-wheel and machinery all still work. Come and learn about life at the mill and the stories of the millers who worked there. Afterwards, take a walk up to the unusual doocot, once home to 500 birds.

13 John Muir Country Park

The John Muir Country Park covers some of the most spectacular East Lothian coastline and is a haven for wildlife and people. From the Castle ruins in Dunbar to the Peffer Burn to the north, it includes the Cliff Top Trail with fine views of the sea and the Bass Rock; the long sandy sweep of Belhaven Bay; the River Tyne estuary; and extensive areas of grassland, salt-marsh and woodland. These diverse habitats contain a wide range of wildlife including birds, butterflies and plants. The Park is named after John Muir, the explorer, naturalist and conservationist born in Dunbar in 1838, and is part of the John Muir Way.

14 John Muir's Birthplace

Born in Dunbar in 1838, John Muir emigrated with his parents to the United States where he campaigned for the preservation of natural environments. Find out how John Muir's life and work has inspired people all over the world and why he is known in the USA as the 'father of the National Parks.' The Dunbar birthplace of the pioneering conservationist is now a family-friendly interpretative centre exploring the work and achievements of this remarkable man.

Open all year round 10am – 5pm Mon – Sat, 1pm – 5pm Sun.

15 St Mary's Church, Haddington

A short walk from historic Haddington's town centre is the longest parish church in Scotland, St Mary's. In a beautiful setting on the banks of the River Tyne, spanned by the nearby 16th century Nungate Bridge, St Mary's is a tranquil oasis with a turbulent history. The present red sandstone building, started in 1375, was partially destroyed during the 1548-49 Siege of Haddington. The church is now fully restored. Combine it with a tranquil walk along the Tyne with a chance to see kingfishers, herons and sometimes even otters.

Open May - Sept, Sun- Fri 1.30pm - 4pm, Sat 11am - 4pm.
Sunday services are 9.30am and 11am.

16 Hailes Castle

In a lovely location above the banks of the River Tyne, surrounded by a cluster of trees, Hailes Castle is a great spot for a picnic. The beautifully sited ruin incorporates a 13th century fortified manor which was extended in the 14th and 15th centuries. There are two vaulted pit-prisons. Despite its setting, it was far from impregnable and often found itself in the way of invading armies. The castle's defenders repulsed two attacks by Henry 'Hotspur' Percy, immortalised in Shakespeare's Henry IV Part One. They were not so fortunate in 1446, 1548 and 1650, when Hailes fell to its enemies. Its most renowned visitor was Mary Queen of Scots who stayed for a night in 1567 before her fateful third wedding to James Hepburn, Earl of Bothwell.

17 Traprain Law

Prominent and unmistakable in the landscape, Traprain Law is the 'plug' or vent of an ancient volcano, like North Berwick Law and the Bass Rock. Access is from a parking area on the north side. Climb the 221 metres for spectacular views across East Lothian. Look out for the remains of an Iron Age hill fort, once home to the Votadini tribe. A hoard of Roman silver tableware, thought to be a payment to the Votadini, was found on Traprain Law in 1919. You can see the impressive collection in the Museum of Scotland, Edinburgh.

18 Pressmennan Wood

Walk through one of the last traces of Scotland's ancient oak woodland. Rich in wildlife, roe deer secretly roam through the trees; otters fish in the lake; woodpeckers can be heard high in the trees; bats and owls come out at dusk in search of food. In spring discover primroses, tranquil bluebells and tasty wood sorrel. But there are other things living here... Follow the sculpture trail and if you're lucky you may spot a wooden door in the trunk of a dead oak or the glint of a small stained glass window high up among the branches; a home for one of the mystical creatures that inhabit Pressmennan.

19 Woodhall Dean

Situated four miles south of Dunbar, Woodhall Dean is an ancient semi-natural woodland filled with sessile oak, and is one of the few surviving remnants of the forests that covered much of southern Scotland 5,000 years ago. The best time to visit is spring and summer when a walk in the woods on the steep narrow circular path, amongst the twisted trees, luxuriant plant life and abundant bird and other wildlife, will seem to transport you to a magical world. Keep an eye out for that elusive British creature, the adder.

20 Barns Ness and White Sands

This seashore site is the best place in central Scotland to look for fossils in the limestone and shales (follow the Scottish Fossil code and don't hammer or dig out fossils). Walking from Whitesands to Barns Ness is to step back in time; between 360-290 million years in fact. The area is also a landing point for migrating birds and home to one of East Lothian's more elusive denizens, the common lizard. The Barns Ness lighthouse was built in 1901 by engineer David Stevenson, cousin of writer Robert Louis Stevenson.

21 St Abb's Head National Nature Reserve

Formed by volcanoes, the sheer cliffs, offshore stacks and narrow gullies of St Abb's Head National Nature Reserve provide scenic beauty and a habitat for some outstanding wildlife. The 90 metre cliffs are home to colonies of guillemots, kittiwakes, razorbills, shags, fulmars, puffins and herring gulls which nest on narrow ledges from April to August. Although best known for its seabirds, the Reserve also has flower rich grasslands and a freshwater loch. There is an exhibition at the visitor centre, from where trails and ranger-guided walks are available. The village of St Abbs is nearby and the sea around the area with its crystal clear water is a well-known scuba diving area.

Admission charge (for visitor centre only)

Itinerary 1

Flights of Fancy

This tour takes in two of the most iconic attractions in East Lothian, the Museum of Flight, home of Concorde, as well as the award winning Seabird Centre at North Berwick. There's the opportunity to stretch your legs on the long sandy beach at Longniddry Bents, where there are rock pools to explore and fine views looking towards Edinburgh and the Forth Bridges. You might even like to pick up fish and chips on your way and enjoy a real taste of the seaside!

National Museum of Flight (11)

From Edinburgh, take the A1 signposted to Berwick-upon-Tweed. After about 15 miles, take the left filter at the Abbotsview Junction at Haddington onto the A199 to East Linton. Continue for 2.5 miles, and turn left on the B1347 signposted for North Berwick. After a couple of miles, turn right to the Museum of Flight (signposted).

Seabird Centre (6)

Leaving the Museum of Flight, turn right to rejoin the B1347 heading to North Berwick. Go straight over the crossroads in North Berwick and head for the town centre and follow signs to the Seabird Centre.

Longniddry Bents (3)

Leave North Berwick on the A198 heading to Dirleton and Edinburgh. Go through the village of Aberlady and along the coastal road. Three car parks are well signposted for Longniddry Bents.

To Edinburgh

Return along the A198 to Edinburgh.

Itinerary 2

Birds By Bus (and train)

Take public transport to enjoy East Lothian's spectacular coast and wildlife without a car. Take the train to Dunbar to find out about John Muir, and enjoy the old harbour and the noisy kittiwake colony on the ruins of Dunbar Castle. Either head out by foot on the John Muir Way towards Belhaven Bay and the John Muir Country Park, or take the bus to Tantallon. You can explore dramatic Tantallon Castle, perched high on the cliffs with views towards the Bass Rock, or admire the view from the bus as you head towards North Berwick. Finish your day in the seaside town of North Berwick. Visit the award winning Scottish Seabird Centre, where you can learn more about the area's incredible wildlife, and if time allows take a boat trip out to the treasure islands of the Firth of Forth.

By train: Scotrail services operate to Edinburgh.

Itinerary 3

Treasures of the Tyne

Start your day in the historic market town of Haddington with a visit to the tranquil oasis of St Mary's Church and a walk along the River Tyne. Journey along the Tyne to Hailes Castle, nestled by the banks of the river, or scale the distinctive whaleback hill of Traprain Law. Travel into the village of East Linton and visit Preston Mill. Finally, make your way to the village of Athelstaneford and discover how clouds gave rise to Scotland's flag.

Haddington, St Mary's Church and the River Tyne (15)

From Edinburgh, take the A1 to Haddington, leaving at the Oak Tree junction. Follow this road into the town. From Market Street in the centre of town, take a right turn at the crossroads, travel along Sidegate, and take the first left into Church Street, where there is parking. Walk along The Sands, past the Peter Potter Gallery, towards the Nungate Bridge on your left and Lady Kitty's Doocot on your right; continue ahead towards St. Mary's Church with the River Tyne to your left. After a visit to St Mary's, walk out of the kirkyard along the path which runs between the River Tyne to your left and the mill lade to your right. Follow the path for as far as you like, enjoying the tranquillity and the wildlife.

Hailes Castle (16) or Traprain Law (17)

From Church Street, turn right and take another right at the traffic lights to leave Haddington, travelling over the Victoria Bridge. Head out along this pretty road past the golf course, through Stevenson Wood towards Hailes Castle. After 5 miles, with Traprain Law rising ahead of you (if you're feeling energetic, why not climb it?), there is a small road to the left, sign posted for Hailes Castle. Follow this road for 2 miles, looking out for farm vehicles over the blind summits of this twisty track, and being prepared to pull into the side to let other vehicles pass. The turning for Hailes Castle is to the left in a dip in the road.

Preston Mill, East Linton (12)

Continue on the road from Hailes Castle, and after it bends to the left between houses, go ahead over the staggered junction, towards East Linton. Follow the road (Lauder Place) into the village, and under the railway bridge turn left, taking the right turn just before the next railway bridge. Travel through the village and take the right turn, sign posted for Smeaton (B1407). Preston Mill is 0.5 miles along this road on the right.

Flag Heritage Centre (10)

From East Linton, take the A199 towards Haddington, up the steep hill of Pencaig, with Traprain Law to your left. After 4 miles, take a right turn onto the B1347 (signposted for the Museum of Flight). There is a left turn onto a small road, signposted for Athelstaneford and the Flag Heritage Centre. Drive through the village and to the parish church and the Flag Heritage Centre, which are on the right.

Return to Edinburgh

Continue out of the village on the B1343. After about 1 mile there is a 'T' junction. Turn left, signposted to Haddington, and continue up and over the Garleton Hills. After a mile you will reach a roundabout; take the third exit signposted Haddington. This leads immediately to a second roundabout. Again, take the third exit, signposted to Edinburgh and the A1.

Itinerary 4

Coast and Countryside

Head further afield to see the spectacular sites at St Abb's Head, one of our National Nature Reserves, with dramatic views of the Berwickshire coastline, and a chance to see puffins and seals. Enjoy the scenic road back along the coast, stopping off in the picturesque fishing village of Dunbar, Birthplace of John Muir, father of the US National Parks. Learn about the life and work of this remarkable man, then walk down to Dunbar Castle in the old harbour and in summer, listen out for the noisy kittiwake colony. Look out for seals in the harbour!

St Abb's Head (21)

Take the A1 east, signposted to Berwick-Upon-Tweed. Turn left on the B6438 to St Abbs. Turn left into Coldingham, and then take the first right to St Abbs. After 1.5 miles, branch left, following the brown signs for St Abb's Nature Reserve.

John Muir's Birthplace, Dunbar (14)

Return along B6438 to Coldingham. Turn right on the A1107 to Edinburgh and follow the signs back to the A1. Filter right onto the A1087 to Dunbar, following the East Lothian Coastal Trail. Follow signs to the Leisure Pool to park, and head down the hill to discover the historic harbour. John Muir's birthplace is in the High Street.

Walk This Way....

East Lothian offers a great variety of landscapes for walking. Many of the paths go to, or pass vantage points offering views of the surrounding rolling landscape. Amongst the features are many hidden gems - river valleys, woodland, secret bays and historic sites.

You can walk or cycle 41 miles along the final section of the John Muir Way which meanders by the coast on good paths with stunning seascape and island views. The route is 134 miles in total and stretches from Helensburgh on the west coast through Scotland's heartland to Dunbar, John Muir's birthplace. From Dunbar you can continue south along the transnational North Sea Trail.

Route details, accommodation and facilities along the John Muir Way are available on the website: www.johnmuirway.org

Further information on other fantastic local walks can be found on www.visiteastlothian.org/activities

On Your Bike...

East Lothian is a wonderful county for cycling. The area is relatively compact and not too hilly, so it's easy to visit several places of interest in one day. The towns and villages provide lots of chances to stop off and refuel!
