

In areas with more greenspace, health differences between high and low income groups are narrower.

