

To address health inequalities, better access to high quality local greenspaces is especially important for people living in areas of greater deprivation...

where current provision is often poorest.

