

People who live close to high quality greenspace are more likely to meet the NHS physical activity guidelines through outdoor exercise...

and report higher levels of mental well-being, than those who live further away.

